Home, Family & Health · Sheet #1

Routine Block	Time Slot	Activity	Why It Works
Wake & Hydrate	6:00-6:15	Get up on the first alarm, drink a full glass of water, open the curtains	Morning light exposure resets your circadian clock so you feel alert faster
Phone-Free Start	6:15-6:30	Fifteen minutes with no screens - coffee, stretch, or simply sit	Protects your focus from other people's agendas before the day begins
Morning Movement	6:30-7:00	Twenty to thirty minutes of walking, stretching, or a workout	Morning exercise raises energy and mood for the rest of the day
Cool Finish Shower	7:00-7:10	End your shower with a cool rinse for the last minute	Cool water triggers alertness and leaves you feeling fully awake
Plan the Day	7:10-7:20	Write down your top three priorities on paper	Deciding once in the morning beats deciding all day under pressure
Deep Work Block	7:20-9:00	Tackle the hardest task first with phone on silent	Willpower and focus peak in the morning - spend them on what matters
Work Shutdown	17:30-18:00	Close open loops, note tomorrow's first task, shut the laptop	A clear shutdown ritual lets your brain truly stop working
Dinner & Family	18:00-19:00	Eat at a table, away from screens, with people you like	Shared meals lower stress and mark the day as officially over
Evening Walk	19:00-19:30	A relaxed walk around the block after dinner	Light movement aids digestion and drops cortisol after a tense day
Review & Journal	19:30-19:45	Write three wins and one lesson from the day	Captures progress your brain would otherwise forget by morning
Digital Sunset	21:00	Screens off - phone charges outside the bedroom	Blue light delays melatonin; removing the source is easier than resisting it
Wind Down & Sleep	21:30-22:00	Read a book, breathe slowly, lights out	Seven to nine hours is the adult target - consistency beats a perfect bedtime

PRO TIP: Anchor to Existing Habits: Link each block to something you already do, like stretching while coffee brews, so routines build on autopilot.
