Quick Reference Cheat Sheet · US Letter Printable

Tech & Software · Sheet #1

Quantifier	Use With	Meaning	Example
some	Countable + uncountable	A certain amount (positive)	I have some friends in town.
any	Countable + uncountable	Any amount (questions, negatives)	Do you have any milk left?
much	Uncountable only	A large amount	There is not much time left.
many	Countable only	A large number	Many students passed the test.
a lot of / lots of	Countable + uncountable	A large amount (informal)	She has a lot of books.
few	Countable only	A small number (not enough)	Few people came to the meeting.
a few	Countable only	A small number (enough)	We have a few minutes left.
little	Uncountable only	A small amount (not enough)	There is little hope left.
a little	Uncountable only	A small amount (enough)	Add a little salt to taste.
no / none	Countable + uncountable	Zero of something	There are no tickets left.
all	Countable + uncountable	The whole amount	All the cake is gone.
each / every	Countable singular	Every single one	Each student got a handout.

PRO TIP: Much vs many is the classic trap: Much goes with uncountable nouns like time and money; many goes with countable nouns like minutes and coins. If you can count it one by one, use many.
